HELPING PEOPLE ADAPT TO CLIMATE CHANGE
USING NATURE-BASED APPROACHES:
Bridging Science and Decision-Making

Evan Girvetz, Senior Scientist, Global Climate Change Program, The Nature Conservancy

Evan is a conservation ecologist with extensive experience in conservation planning, environmental decision support, and climate change impact assessment. He is widely published and his research has been featured in top media outlets including the San Francisco Chronicle, Seattle Times and New Scientist magazine.

Monday, November 7, 2011
4:30pm - 6:00pm
White Hall 110

Free and open to the public

Co-sponsors:
The Department of Environmental Studies, Emory Program in Development Studies