REGIONAL and INTERNATIONAL PERSPECTIVES on SUDAN and SOUTH SUDAN since INDEPENDENCE

Wednesday, February 15th
Woodruff Library • Jones Room • 7:30 p.m.

July 9, 2011, marked the independence of South Sudan and the completion of the 2005 Comprehensive Peace Agreement between the Republic of Sudan and the Sudan People’s Liberation Movement/Army. Six months later conflict in the region continues. Since independence, tensions along the Sudan and South Sudan border remain high and regional security is threatened by communal clashes within the South as well as ongoing conflicts about oil revenue. In light of these unfolding events, the Institute for Developing Nations and The Carter Center’s Conflict Resolution Program have assembled a group of experts to provide international and regional perspectives on Sudan and South Sudan’s ongoing peace processes.

FEATURING

Amb. Timothy Carney, fmr U.S. Ambassador to Sudan
Amb. Alan Goult, fmr U.K. Special Representative to Sudan
Amb. David Kanya, fmr President Maka’s Special Advisor and Envoy to Sudan
Deborah Scroggins, Journalist and Author of Emma’s War: An Aid Worker, Radical Islam and the Politics of Oil in Sudan
Jeffrey Mapendere, Field Director, Carter Center Peace Programs Sudan/South Sudan

co-sponsored by

Emory University’s Institute for Developing Nations & The Carter Center’s Conflict Resolution Program