“Lake Victoria, 1907: Histories and Strategies of Sleeping Sickness Prevention”

Thursday
Nov. 3, 2011
12 – 1 pm

Anthropology
Room: 206
Light Lunch to be Served

SPEAKER : Mari Webel, PhD

Emory Institute of African Studies and Global Health Post-Doctoral Fellow, PhD in History from Columbia University. Her current research focuses on sleeping sickness in East Africa's Great Lakes region in the early twentieth century, investigating new tropical medicine interventions and how these were shaped by the changing politics and economies of kingdoms in the region.

Sponsored by Emory Program in Development Studies